The challenges facing navies today and tomorrow are intricate and multi-faceted. They are also highly contextual. Whilst some European states are concerned with how to implement carrier air power, others are more concerned with constabulary missions in the Mediterranean: Baltic navies, by comparison, continue to be vexed by an appropriate response to revanchist Russian activities in confined and shallow waters.

Further afield, navies are occupied with war fighting capabilities that focus on defending space and people rather than 'informationising' the battlespace.

The First Sea Lord/RUSI International Sea Power Conference will provide an excellent conceptual component to the already strong maritime element of DSEI 2015, which will include visiting naval vessels and waterborne demonstrations. Upgrade your DSEI 2015 badge by contacting our team today.

The conference will feature a variety of senior naval leaders from around the world on their specific concerns, challenges and approaches for the future.
